THIS WEEK'S FEATURED CLASSES

SC 207 A Geologic Travelogue: Understanding the Wonders - Part 2

Ireland and Tasmania

Monday, April 27

10 AM - 12 Noon

Gary Oberts, Geologist

This class takes you on a trip with a geologist to locations that you might have visited, or have in mind for a future visit. The beauty and geologic history responsible for it will be viewed and explained. We will explore the wild coast of Tasmania, and the tectonic impacts in New Zealand. Whether you have some knowledge of geology or not, we hope to enhance your appreciation of these locations.

SS 309 The Contentious Debate
Over U.S. Immigration Policy - Part 2

Thursday April 30

10 AM – 12 Noon

Louis DeSipio

Author, Professor of Political Science, UCI

What would it take for congress to summon the political will to craft a "comprehensive" immigration policy? The U.S. Congress has the constitutional power and responsibility to enact laws pertaining to immigration and naturalization. In recent decades it has been unable to agree on the compromises necessary to reach agreements on major issues. The cause of this failure lies in the deep divisions in national and state politics, the courts, the media, the blogosphere and communities.

SC210 Cutting Edge Climate Research at UCI - Part 1

Melting Ice Sheets
and the Resulting Rise in Sea Level

Friday, May 1

10:00 AM – 12 Noon

Bernd Scheuchl, Associate Project Scientist,
Rignot Research Group, UCI ESS

The UCI Dept. of Earth System Science (ESS) is a worldwide leader in climate change (CC) research. We will hear from those researchers talking about important impacts of climate change pertinent to CA.

SS 308 Tensions Between
United States, Russia and China - Part 3

Friday, May 1

1:00 PM – 3:00 PM

Thomas Bernstein, Professor Emeritus
Political Science, Columbia University

Could current tensions between the United States, Russia and China lead to a second Cold War? The three countries played key roles in the first cold war, 1947-1991. When the Soviet Union disintegrated in the early 1990s, people were hopeful that a new era of friendship had begun. We will examine the first Cold War, and then ask why tension in recent years could amount to a second Cold War.

Next Week's Live Streamed Classes

SS 312 World War II Remembered - Part 1

On the Ground in Europe and the South Pacific

Tuesday, May 5

10:00 AM – 12 Noon

Gary Oberts, STEM Committee Member

In 2010-14, OLLI presented a five-part class entitled World War II: Remembered, which brought together veterans, Holocaust survivors, historians and civilians with their stories of the war. Four videotaped years provide a treasure of fascinating stories. We will present a series of four classes that include selections from the video library and discussion about those presenters.

SC210 Cutting Edge Climate Research at UCI-Part 2

Wildfires and the Bio-impacts of Climate Change

Friday, May 8

10:00 AM – 12 Noon

James Randerson

The Ralph J. and Carol Cicerone

Professor at UCI

The UCI Dept. of Earth System Science (ESS) is a worldwide leader in climate change (CC) research. We will hear from those researchers talking about important impacts of climate change pertinent to CA.
