Volunteer Opportunities

The OLLI world has changed to a virtual world due to the coronavirus and OLLI members and facilitators are adapting to the limitations that are a fact of the imposed isolation and distancing from one another.

To preserve the OLLI spirit of continued and lifelong learning and building social connections, we are looking for different means to bring new and old OLLI members, presenters, and facilitators together.

I would be so grateful to have you voice your ideas for structuring a new format, based on your past experiences and your exposure to the classes that you have viewed using the remote learning center. In that new format, how could we accomplish what facilitators did before COVID-19 changed things?

For example, should we:

1. Make sure members understand how they can participate? (Marc Nussbaum has an excellent video on using live streaming, but people may require personalized help);
2. Allow for presenters to receive feedback in the form of questions or suggestions before or after the event?
3. Keep track of who was going to attend and who actually did (when people are not a captive audience as in the classroom,

- interruptions of live streaming are more likely);
4. When appropriate or helpful to the audience, introduce the speaker before the event?

Please take the time to send me your suggestions for new approaches and in what way you could see yourself being involved. You may contact me at mariette@logiqwest.com. I would be grateful to have your input.
